3. [REDACTED] briefed me on the DD/P personnel ceiling. Our personnel statistics indicate that as of the end of October the "on duty" strength for this area exceeded the established ceiling by 212 positions; however, Ken explained that 66 of this number actually were chargeable to the DD/I ceiling. I verified this, and the personnel statistics should be amended in future reports to reflect the true picture. He also pointed out that as of 1 January approximately [REDACTED] excess would go back to their parent career services outside of the DD/P area---due to the fact that [REDACTED] is folding up. This will then leave the DD/P side of the house in about as good shape as either of the other major components.

25X1A6a seas service [REDACTED] is upset because he believes that the Fit-25X1A9a ness Report given him for his service [REDACTED] is the reason why he is about to be 25X1A6a 25X1A9a released from active duty with the Army about a year short of his eligibility for retirement as an officer. I asked Vernon to have [REDACTED] find out what the facts were insofar as the Army was concerned and said that after this had been done I thought we should prepare a memorandum to the Inspector General asking him to investigate the 25X1A9a charges which [REDACTED] has made against the Agency and its employees.
